This is an appeal by the State of Idaho, Department of Employment, from the Industrial Commissions decision awarding claimant unemployment compensation after claimant failed to accept an offer of employment. The issues concern the interpretation and application of I.C. Å§ 72-1366(f) and (g), which pertain respectively to the eligibility requirement of willingness to accept suitable work, and to the statutory considerations for determining whether work is indeed suitable. We affirm the decision of the Industrial Commission, to the effect that while the work claimant offered was arguably suitable, nonetheless, claimant had good cause to reject it.
